Market Round Up:

- Last week as stated from the ECB meet that they will keep rates at record lows for the next one year, provide unlimited funding to banks and keep up asset purchases albeit at a lower size. ECB is providing the backstop for markets in search of risk and this will drive currencies in the next one year.
- Euro depreciated by 1.49% against the USD last week after the European Central Bank, in its policy meet on Thursday, said it would extend its bond purchases at a reduced rate. ECB will cut asset purchases to 30 billion euros from 60 billion euros starting January while extending the scheme by 9 months to September next year. Pace of QE tapering is in line with the market expectations.
- USD traded higher against all of the major currencies last week. The Australian dollar experienced the steepest losses. The Japanese yen and British pound were the only currencies that managed to hold somewhat steady in the face of USD's gains.

FUNDAMENTAL OF COMMODITIES

Updates:

- Last weekend Gold prices rose on Friday but manages to close on loss on weekly basis as strong dollar and weaker Euro kept the demand for Yellow metal dull, reversing earlier losses as the Catalonian parliament's declaration of independence bolstered safe haven demand for the precious metal.
- Gold is highly sensitive to rising rates, which lift the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding assets such as bullion, while boosting the dollar, in which it is priced.
- Crude oil prices continued its rally and rose on Friday, lifting the U.S. benchmark to its highest finish in nearly eight months and sending the global crude benchmark above $60 a barrel for the first time in more than two years amid expectations that major global producers will extend a deal to curb production beyond its current expiry date next March.
- Three-month copper price fell $96 per ton to below $6,900 per ton, succumbing to pressure from a strengthening dollar. The break higher in the dollar index has only started so further selling pressure could materialize in copper in coming session.
